

Mises Canada

Tu Ne Cede Malis

Search here...

HOME LVMIC DAILY ABOUT BLOG EMERGING SCHOLARS ICPM MEDIA DONATE MISES ON POLICY

Free Not to Vote

Friday, October 17th, 2014 by Allen Mendenhall posted in Politics.

The 2014 U.S. midterm elections are coming up, and I don't intend to vote. A vote is like virginity: you don't give it away to the first flower-bearing suitor. I haven't been given a

Donate

We need your support!

Donate Now

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF PRICES & MARKETS
November 7-8, 2014 Toronto, ON

LvMIC Daily Newsletter

Email...

SUBMIT

good reason, let alone flowers, to vote for any candidate, so I will stay home, as well I should.

This month, my wife, a Brazilian citizen, drove from Auburn, Alabama, to Atlanta, Georgia, on a Sunday morning to cast her vote for the presidential election in Brazil. She arrived at the Brazilian consulate and waited in a long line of expatriates only to be faced with a cruel choice: vote for the incumbent socialist Dilma Rousseff of the Workers' Party, for the socialist Aécio Neves of the Brazilian Social Democracy Party who is billed as a center-right politician, for the environmentalist socialist Marina Silva of the Socialist Party, or for any of the other socialist candidates who were polling so low that they had no chance of victory. Brazil maintains a system of compulsory voting in addition to other compulsory schemes such as conscription for all males aged 18.

Logan Albright recently wrote about the folly of compulsory voting, support for which is apparently growing in Canada. He criticized the hypocrisy of an allegedly democratic society mandating a vote and then fining or jailing those who do not follow the mandate. He also pointed out the dangers of forcing uneducated and uninformed citizens to vote against their will. This problem is particularly revealing in Brazil, where illiterate candidates have exploited election laws to run absurd commercials and to assume the persona of silly characters such as a clown, Wonder Woman, Rambo, Crazy Dick, and Hamburger Face, each of which is worth googling for a chuckle. The incumbent clown, by the way, was just reelected on the campaign slogan "it can't get any worse." Multiple Barack Obamas and Osama bin Ladens were also running for office, as was, apparently, Jesus. The ballot in Brazil has become goofier than a middle-school election for class president.

Even in the United States, as the election of Barack Obama demonstrates, voting has become more about identity politics, fads, and personalities than about principle or platform. Just over a decade ago, Arnold Schwarzenegger became the Governor of California amid a field of second-rate celebrities while a former professional wrestler (the fake and not the Olympian kind of wrestling) Jesse "the Body" Ventura was winding up his term as the Governor of Minnesota. Today comedian Al Franken holds a seat in the United States Senate. It turns out that Brazil isn't the only country that can boast having a clown in office.

No serious thinker believes that a Republican or Democratic politician has what it takes to boost the economy, facilitate peace, or generate liberty. The very function of a career politician is antithetical to market freedom; no foolish professional vote-getter ought to have the power he or she enjoys under the current managerial state system, but voting

LvMIC Weekly Newsletter

SUBMIT

Categories

Announcements

Banking

Capitalism

Civil Liberties

Economics

Education

Environment

Epistemology

Events

Foreign Policy

Health Care

History

Intellectual Property

Law

Lifestyle

Methodology

Music

Philosophy

Politics

Politique

Regulation

Socialism

Toronto Austrian Scholars

Conference

Trade

legitimizes that power.

It is often said, “If you don’t vote, you can’t complain.” The counterpoint is that voting ensures your complicity with the policies that elected politicians will enact. If you don’t vote, you lack complicity. You are not morally blameworthy for resisting the system that infringes basic rights or that offends your sense of justice and reason. You have not bestowed credibility on the government with your formal participation in its most sacred ritual. The higher the number of voters who participate in an election, the more legitimacy there is for the favored projects of the elected politicians, and the more likely those politicians are to impose their will on the populace by way of legislation or other legal means.

Refusing to vote can send a message: get your act together or we won’t turn out at the polling stations. Low voter turnout undermines the validity of the entire political system. Abstention also demonstrates your power: just watch how the politicians grovel and scramble for your vote, promise you more than they can deliver, beg for your support. This is how it ought to be: Politicians need to work for your vote and to earn it. They need to prove that they are who they purport to be and that they stand for that which they purport to stand. If they can’t do this, they don’t deserve your vote.

Abstention is not apathy; it is the exercise of free expression, a voluntary act of legitimate and peaceful defiance, the realization of a right.

There are reasonable alternatives to absolute abstention: one is to vote for the rare candidate who does, in fact, seek out liberty, true liberty; another is to cast a protest vote for a candidate outside the mainstream. Regardless, your vote is a representation of your person, the indicia of your moral and ethical beliefs. It should not be dispensed with lightly.

If you have the freedom not to vote, congratulations: you still live in a society with a modicum of liberty. Your decision to exercise your liberty is yours alone. Choose wisely.

Allen Mendenhall is a Mises Canada Emerging Scholar. He is a staff attorney to Chief Justice Roy S. Moore of the Supreme Court of Alabama, an adjunct professor at Faulkner University, and a doctoral candidate in English at Auburn University. His book is Literature and Liberty: Essays in Libertarian Literary Criticism. Visit his website at AllenMendenhall.com.

Tags: liberty, logan albright, midterm elections, United States, voting

Uncategorized War on Drugs

Archives

October 2014
September 2014
August 2014
July 2014
June 2014
May 2014
April 2014
March 2014
February 2014
January 2014
December 2013
November 2013
October 2013
September 2013
August 2013
July 2013
June 2013
May 2013
April 2013
March 2013
February 2013
January 2013
December 2012
November 2012
October 2012
September 2012
August 2012
July 2012
June 2012
May 2012

Comments

 Login

There are no comments posted yet. Be the first one!

Post a new comment

Enter text right here!

Comment as a Guest, or login:  intensedebate  WORDPRESS.COM  twitter

Name

Displayed next to your comments.

Email

Not displayed publicly.

Website (optional)

If you have a website, link to it here.

Subscribe to

Submit Comment

April 2012
March 2012
February 2012
January 2012
December 2011
November 2011
October 2011
September 2011
August 2011
July 2011
June 2011
May 2011
April 2011
March 2011
February 2011
January 2011
December 2010

Links

Acting Man
Capitalism Institute
Cliff KÃ¼le's Notes
Freedomain Radio
LewRockwell.com
Liberal Studies
Michael Geist
Mises Academy
Mises Wiki
Mises.org
Stephan Kinsella
The Freeman Online
Walter Block

New Comments

on Mises Canada

---

The last comments for

Occupational Licensure Strikes Again

 carinsurance

The government promised to bring the rates down by an average of 15 per cent across the province by August...

» 2 hours ago

Jump to →

---

The last comments for

Mathematical Economics vs. "Literary" Economics?

 Joseph Jackson

Its really good to know about the mathematical economics some key features and other guided points given...

» 3 hours ago

Jump to →

---

The last comments for

Death of an Auto Industry

 website design 44p

A fascinating exchange is worth remark. I surmise that you ought to compose all the more on this point,...

» 1 day ago

Jump to →

---

The last comments for

Larry Summers on Piketty: Low Bar for Nobel Prizes These Days

 Harold

Criticism: You make these claims by ignoring solid

Keynesian evidence (the real mainstream amongst most...

» 1 day ago

Jump to →

Comments by IntenseDebate

contact@mises.ca

Ludwig von Mises

INSTITUTE OF CANADA

Home | LvMIC Daily | About | Blog | Emerging Scholars | ICPM | Media | Donate | Mises on Policy

Ludwig von Mises Institute of Canada Copyright 2012. All Rights Reserved.

Log in